HOUSE PASSES SPENDING BILL THAT WOULD REPEAL SOME ACA TAXES

OVERVIEW

On Dec. 17, 2019, the U.S. House of Representatives passed a short-term continuing spending resolution to prevent a government shutdown and continue funding through September 2020. If signed into law, the spending bill would repeal the following three largely unpopular taxes and fees under the Affordable Care Act (ACA):

- ✓ The Cadillac tax on high-cost group health coverage, beginning in 2020;
- ✓ The medical devices excise tax, beginning in 2020; and
- ✓ The health insurance providers fee, beginning in 2021.

This bill would need to be passed by the Senate and signed into law by President Trump before taking effect.

ACTION STEPS

Employers should be aware of the evolving applicability of existing ACA taxes and fees so that they know how the ACA affects their bottom lines. Winceline will continue to keep you informed of changes.

Cadillac Tax

The ACA imposes a 40 percent excise tax on high-cost group health coverage, also known as the “Cadillac tax.” This provision taxes the amount, if any, by which the monthly cost of an employee's applicable employer-sponsored health coverage exceeds the annual limitation (called the employee’s excess benefit). The tax amount for each employee’s coverage will be calculated by the employer and paid by the coverage provider.

Although originally intended to take effect in 2013, the Cadillac tax was immediately delayed until 2018 following the ACA’s enactment. A federal budget bill enacted for 2016 further delayed implementation of this tax until 2020, and also:

- ✓ Removed a provision prohibiting the Cadillac tax from being deducted as a business expense; and
- ✓ Required a study to be conducted on the age and gender adjustment to the annual limit.

If enacted, the 2019 continuing spending resolution would fully repeal the Cadillac tax, beginning with the 2020 taxable year.

Then, a 2018 continuing spending resolution delayed implementation of the Cadillac tax for an additional two years, until 2022.

There was some indication that these delays would eventually lead to an eventual repeal of the Cadillac tax provision altogether. The Cadillac tax has been a largely unpopular provision since its enactment, and a number of bills have been introduced into Congress to repeal this tax over the past several years.

Health Insurance Providers Fee

Beginning in 2014, the ACA imposed an annual, nondeductible fee on the health insurance sector, allocated across the industry according to market share. This health insurance providers fee, which is treated as an excise tax, is required to be paid by Sept. 30 of each calendar year. The first fees were due Sept. 30, 2014.

The 2016 federal budget suspended collection of the health insurance providers fee for the 2017 calendar year. Thus, health insurance issuers were not required to pay these fees for 2017. However, this moratorium expired at the end of 2017. A 2019 continuing resolution provided an additional one-year moratorium on the health insurance providers fee for the 2019 calendar year, although the fee continued to apply for the 2018 calendar year.

If enacted, the 2019 continuing spending resolution would fully repeal the health insurance providers fee, beginning with the 2021 calendar year. Employers are not directly subject to the health insurance providers fee. However, in many cases, providers of insured plans have been passing the cost of the fee on to the employers sponsoring the coverage. As a result, this repeal may result in significant savings for some employers on their health insurance rates.

Medical Devices Excise Tax

The ACA also imposes a 2.3 percent excise tax on the sales price of certain medical devices, effective beginning in 2013. Generally, the manufacturer or importer of a taxable medical device is responsible for reporting and paying this tax to the IRS. The 2016 federal budget suspended collection of the medical devices tax for two years, in 2016 and 2017. As a result, this tax did not apply to sales made between Jan. 1, 2016, and Dec. 31, 2017. A 2018 continuing resolution extended this moratorium for an additional two years, through the 2019 calendar year. The moratorium is set to expire beginning in 2020.

If enacted, the 2019 continuing spending resolution would fully repeal the medical devices tax, beginning in 2020. Therefore, as a result of both moratoriums and the repeal, the medical devices tax would not apply to any sales made after Jan. 1, 2016.
